Workshop 1

Education of Tolerance - An Analysis of UAE Islamic Education Curriculum at the Secondary Level (Bilingual)

The UAE is a nation composed of more than 200 nationalities with various religious and ethnic communities. In light of these realities, tolerance is essential for fostering a cohesive and peaceful society. This research engages in a textual analysis of Islamic Education textbooks, combined with classroom observations, and interviews of Islamic Education teachers to better understand how tolerance is conceptualized in the Islamic Education curriculum and the challenges associated with addressing the themes of tolerance, mutual respect, and the acceptance of other cultures

Science can save humanity, if We Just Understand Ourselves Better Through It!

Science shows that we are naturally and biologically built to be kind, empathetic and compassionate towards each other. That is how humanity has survived and flourished for over thousands of years and generations. We will look into the evolution of the human brain more closely and understand its current programming and its ability to reprogram itself, a phenomenon known as Neuroplasticity. We will explore how other anatomical parts of our bodies are dedicated to motivating us to affiliate and connect with others. We will also see the power of words and how they influence the path to peace, tolerance and acceptance.

By attending this session, you will have acquired research-backed insights, tools and practices from the trailblazing science of positive psychology, applied neurosciences and mindfulness that you can use to help rewire your brain to think and feel more positively about people and events, to be resilient and grateful despite external adversaries and challenges and to help forgive others and ourselves effectively. Most importantly, this session will raise questions about our pre-conceived beliefs and help adjust misguided perceptions that are getting in the way of a more peaceful world.
